UBWA Involvement

Apply for the UBWA Blog!

UBWA strives to bring together all students interested in empowering women by encouraging personal and professional growth. Three core pillars of empowerment are furthering ourselves and others, being in the know about the issues, news, and advancements in the world, and communicating to start a conversation about how we can change and better the world.

The first official UBWA blog, The UBWA Post, will strive to further this mission by sharing professional development materials and women’s news, advancements, initiatives, or issues in the world of business, to equip all students interested in empowering women with the knowledge and tools to do so! By joining the UBWA Blog Committee you will not only get to hone in on your writing and communication skills, but you will get practical experience as an author and editor, a leadership position in the Association, and material that you’ll create to add to your portfolio. Though, most importantly, you’ll get the opportunity to communicate knowledge to start conversations and to take action to change and better yourself, others, and the world.

If you’re interested in applying for this committee, please fill out this application by Sunday, November 18th at 11:59pm. Please reach out to Liz Kazemi (Kazemi.18) if you have any questions!
